

Voices From The Voice:

Generations of student journalists reflect on what the paper meant to them.

I remember always being glad that the newsroom felt like a nice place to be for anyone on staff who wanted to be there. Just being in that room and talking through the latest issues we saw around campus really exemplified how strong a community The Voice creates for students.

- Trey Nemec, Editor-in-Chief (2024-2025)

Being editor taught me to ask for forgiveness and not permission. That approach to journalism, and life, has liberated the way that I use my voice to advocate and inform for those that trust me and share their stories with me.

- Keyona Smith, Editor-in-Chief (2018-2020)

When the issue came out, Dr. Miller handed me a copy in class. My photo and article ended up on the front page, which felt huge at the time. In college, that felt like money.

- Niema Williams, News Editor (2018-2019)

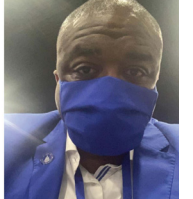

I think the work I put into the YouTube and social media channels is the fondest memory for me. The Voice was and is the foundation to spread awareness of the paper across campus showed what being a writer and leader meant to me.

- DorMiya Vance, Editor-in-Chief (2021-2022)

THE VOICE FOR STUDENTS, BY STUDENTS

Fayetteville State Traditions Cancelled in 'the Interest of Public Health'

FSU News put out the word that homecoming will not follow the traditions and have the much-anticipated Homecoming parade and pep rally. The announcement comes after SGA President Sydney Harris addressed the Homecoming members of many FSU students and staff.

FSU Alumni Kendrick Patton

Homecoming Week OCTOBER 11-17, 2021 uncsu.edu/homecoming

The "difficult decision" of canceling these Homecoming traditions came in "the interest of public health." Those on campus "have done a tremendous job of getting vaccinated," but "Cumberland County still has one of the highest COVID-19 rates in the state."

In today's world, it can be easy to feel powerless and despair. But one of the reasons I love The Voice is that it gives FSU students a chance to learn skills and grow as professionals, and grow into their power. Students can see that by doing good work, they can make a difference. I cannot express enough how privileged I feel witnessing that.

- Dr. Alanna Miller, Advisor (2015-Present)

THE VOICE FOR STUDENTS, BY STUDENTS. April 2017 Edition. "It Should Be Bronco Boulevard!"

THE VOICE FOR STUDENTS, BY STUDENTS. Florence visits Fayetteville

Fayetteville State Teachers College VOICE DEDICATION ISSUE FOR STUDENTS, BY STUDENTS. FSU ARCHIVES

THE VOICE FOR STUDENTS, BY STUDENTS. Florence visits Fayetteville

Important Registration Information Inside! The Broncos' VOICE FSU ARCHIVES

FAYETTEVILLE STATE UNIVERSITY STUDENT PRESS THE VOICE FOR STUDENTS, BY STUDENTS. A 65 YEAR LEGACY